What do we do with your health information?

Member services: We are trained to help you. We sometimes need to see your health information to answer your questions.

Help take care of you: We may use your health information to help manage your health care. We also use it to decide what treatment your benefits cover. We may tell you about different services available, such as shots, checkups, or medical screenings. We may also send you appointment reminders.

We may share your health information with other people who give you care. This could include doctors, hospitals, drug stores, and others. If you are no longer a member of the Plan, we will first ask you to give us your okay to give your health information to a doctor.

Family and friends: We may give out your health information to a family member or friend who is helping you with your care or the payment for your care. For example, if you have an accident, we may need to talk with your spouse. Let us know if you do not want us to give your health information to a family member or friend who is helping you. Our address and phone number are at the end of this notice.

For payment: We will use your health information and may share it with others to pay for your care. For example, your doctor must submit a claim form to us that contains your health information. We may also use your health information to review the care your doctor gives you or to review your use of health benefits.

Health care operations: We may use your health information to help us do our job. We may use your health information for:

- Health promotion and disease prevention
- Quality improvement
- Legal matters
- Insurance administration
- Case management
- Accounting and audits
- Fraud prevention
- Business management and planning

For example, a case manager may work with your doctor. The case manager may help you get services for a health care problem. The case manager may also suggest other programs or places that can help.

Public purposes: We may use or give out your health information for certain public purposes. Examples of these are:

- Required by law: Federal, state, or local laws sometimes require us to give your health information to others. For example, we must give information to Connecticut Health & Social Services about fraud.
- Public safety and law enforcement: We may give out health information for public safety and law enforcement purposes. For example, we may give health information to law enforcement officials if they give us a search warrant or a grand jury subpoena.

We also may give information to law enforcement officials in an investigation, prosecution, or criminal or civil proceeding, or if the law enforcement officials have other legal authority to get the information from us.

- Oversight: We are often examined by state and federal government agencies to make sure the Plan and your doctors are doing a good job. When these agencies do their review, we must let them see our member's records.
- Disputes: We may give out your health information if it is required in a lawsuit or legal dispute.

Special protection for HIV testing information: We may have HIV testing information about you. We will first ask you to give us your written okay to give this information to others in certain circumstances.

Uses of your information: By enrolling in the Plan, you have given us your permission to use your health information as described above. We may need to use or give out your health information for other reasons. We will first ask you to give us your written okay to give out your information for other reasons.

If you give us your okay to use or give out your health information, you may cancel your okay at any time. If we have already done something based on your okay, we cannot change it. To cancel your okay, write to us at the address at the end of this notice.

Sometimes we do not need your okay to use your health information. For example, we may use or give out your health information if:

- It is required by law or a court order for certain purposes; or
- It is required by Connecticut Health and Social Services.
